FREAKS

On Thursday, April 30, the camera team for Ken Burns present the movie "Freaks," I saw the film, and I was absolutely wowed. The film is an incredible documentary that explores the lives of individuals with disabilities. It provides a powerful reminder of how society has treated people with disabilities throughout history and continues to marginalize them today. The film is a must-watch for anyone interested in the history of disability and the ongoing struggle for civil rights.

By Shanice Green

On Thursday, April 30, I had the opportunity to attend the talk by Robert B. Woodward and Wesley Clark. They discussed the Watergate scandal and its impact on American politics. Their insights were fascinating and provided a valuable perspective on this important event. It was a privilege to hear their thoughts on such a significant topic.

CEIL PETTY

ON THE POLITICS OF POPULATION CONTROL

By Holli Geier

(CEIL PETTY, a Republican freshmen senator from Wisconsin, today introduced a resolution that would allow the Department of Agriculture to implement a program that would provide sterilization to women in rural areas of the state. The resolution has been met with mixed reactions from the public, with some advocating for the program and others opposing it.)

A MAN'S PROBLEM, TOO

By Jeffrey Stone

One of the many controversies about the history of the American workforce is the issue of workplace violence. Studies have shown that employees who work in dangerous environments are at a higher risk of experiencing violence. In recent years, there have been several incidents where employees have been injured or killed while working. It is crucial that employers take steps to ensure the safety and well-being of their employees.

"EVERYBODY KNOWS THIS STUDENT" or "BALLAD OF A HAMPSHIRE STUDENT"

by David Bloom

I had read 20th Century, a novel about the life of a Jewish student at Harvard University during the 1920s. It was a story about the challenges faced by students in the early decades of the 20th century, about the struggle to find their place in society.

"The war was over. I was 21. I was a student at Harvard University. I was a Jew. I was alone, and I was afraid."

The war had been raging for years. I had grown up during the war, and I had seen the destruction it brought. It was a time of great change, a time of great hope.

"I have always loved Harvard. I have always loved the city of Boston. I have always loved the people of Boston. I have always loved the state of Massachusetts."

As a student at Harvard, I had been a part of a community of students who were just like me. We had shared the same hopes and dreams, the same fears and concerns.

"I was a student at Harvard University. I was a Jew. I was alone, and I was afraid."

The war had ended, but the challenges I faced as a student in the early 20th century were still with me. I had to work hard to succeed, to find my place in society.

"The war was over. I was 21. I was a student at Harvard University. I was a Jew. I was alone, and I was afraid."
Blues at its Best

I have just the privilege of being chosen as president of the Schenectady Community Band for the 1982 season. For the past 15 years I have served the band in various positions. It was a great honor to be chosen for this position. The people in my position of being president are wonderful. They are all dedicated to the band and the community.

I would like to take this opportunity to thank everyone who has contributed to the band's success. Without the support of our patrons, we would not be able to continue to entertain the community.

Please join us for our next rehearsal on Tuesday, September 20, at 7:30 PM. We look forward to welcoming new members and continuing our tradition of excellence in music.
The Big Six?
by Joe Yune

I was sitting in the audience with 500 other people. The room was crowded with people all crammed into a small room. I was sitting next to a man who was talking about his experience with the Big Six. He said that he was there to recruit for his company, and that they had a lot of positions open for people who were interested in the field.

The audience was quite diverse, with people of all ages and backgrounds. Some were sitting together, while others were scattered throughout the room. The room was quite loud, with the sound of people talking over each other.

I noticed that there were several signs and banners displayed around the room, indicating that this was a recruiting event for the Big Six. There were also several people standing in front of the stage, wearing suits and ties, and speaking to the audience.

I was impressed by the level of organization and professionalism of the event. The speakers were articulate and knowledgeable, and the audience was engaged and attentive. The event seemed to be well-attended, with a large number of people in attendance.

After the event was over, I spoke with a few people who had been there. They were all very positive about the event and the opportunities that were presented. Overall, I found the event to be a very positive experience, and I was glad that I had attended.
