Women's Pentagon Action

by Glitterme Nagot

On December 11, 2000, more than 200 women marched in solidarity with the Million Women's Action. The national march took place in Washington, DC, and aimed to draw attention to the Pentagon, which is considered to be a symbol of militarism and war. The march was organized by a coalition of women's groups and aimed to protest the war in Iraq and the policies of the Bush administration.

I was privileged to witness this event as a journalist covering the protest. The women were diverse in age, race, and political affiliations, but they shared a common goal: to bring attention to the issue of war and to demand an end to the suffering it causes. The march route was planned to be peaceful and non-violent, and the participants were encouraged to wear white in order to symbolize peace and purity.

As the women marched, they chanted slogans and held signs calling for peace and ending the war. The atmosphere was one of determination and hope, as the women walked together to make their voices heard.

The march ended with a rally outside the Pentagon, where speakers addressed the crowd. The speakers included women from various organizations, and they spoke passionately about the need for peace and an end to the war. The rally was a powerful moment, as the women's voices were heard loud and clear.

The event was a testament to the power of peaceful protest and the importance of listening to the voices of those who are affected by war. The women's March was a powerful reminder that change can be achieved through unity and determination.

The Thursday night after Thanksgiving I boarded a plane to find that my name had been included as one of those who were not to receive a letter by order of my military service. My name and my address did not exist. I was left to my own devices. I found myself in a new environment with no means of contact with my family or friends. I was isolated and at a loss for words.

Minority opinion: ‘Sabbath-hating’
By E. D. Langer
I am not aware of any student of any religious persuasion, including the Jewish student, who is considered a “sabbath-hater” in this school. We had a body of people involved in the Peace Center (Third World Liberation) “Organization which has been in existence for the last three years. The “Liberty’s group” was “presumed to have committed acts of violence.”

The Heart of the Monster

In the Heart of the Monster by Thomas Darragh Maloney

But the reality is the real horror. It’s not just the технологии that makes the difference. It’s not just the software that makes the difference. It’s not just the hardware that makes the difference. It’s the people who are using the technology. The people who are making the decisions. They are the ones who are truly using the technology. They are the ones who are truly making the decisions. They are the ones who are truly creating the future. They are the ones who are truly shaping the world. They are the ones who are truly making the difference. They are the ones who are truly creating the future. They are the ones who are truly shaping the world. They are the ones who are truly making the difference. They are the ones who are truly creating the future. They are the ones who are truly shaping the world. They are the ones who are truly making the difference. They are the ones who are truly creating the future. They are the ones who are truly shaping the world. They are the ones who are truly making the difference. They are the ones who are truly creating the future. They are the ones who are truly shaping the world. They are the ones who are truly making the difference.

The Insect Comedy

Bugging out on The Insect Comedy by John H. Smith

The Insect Comedy was a hit last weekend. The cast and crew worked hard to bring this production to life. The audience was captivated by the performances of the insects, who were played by local actors. The play was a cross between a traditional insect play and a modern-day comedy. The actors did an excellent job of capturing the natural behavior of the insects, and the audience was reminded of the importance of protecting our planet. The play was a great success, and the audience was left wanting more. The Insect Comedy is a must-see for anyone who loves insects or just wants a fun night out.
